156	'Just Another Case'. An Eight Vulkan fibre suitcase circa 1930 together with an archive and provenance relating to the arrest and transportation of a Polish family to Siberia by the Russians on 3/2/1940. The story is truly horrific but an amazing testament to survival. The Akonom family lived in the village of Novogrode near Stolpce on the estate of Prince Radziwitt. Mr Akonom was a forrester living with his wife and four children. On the 3/2/1940 Russian soldiers arrived and they were given one hour to pack what they could carry (the suitcase) etc. The vendor's husband Stanislan who was 13 years old asked if he could say goodbye to his beloved pony and dog. This was agreed and the soldier accompanied him to the barn to say farewell. The guard then shot the animals in front of him and they were all marched off for transportation in a packed cattle truck to Siberia, a journey that would take a month in freezing temperatures without food, only opening the doors to remove the dead. With the exception of the eldest daughter, who died of typhus and the father buried in a forest, they all survived. Two years later the family was split up, the mother taking the 'suitcase' to South Africa with the girls. It was six years before they were reunited by the Red Cross. Their crime - 'they were educated'. NOTE: The Soviet Union invaded Poland on 17/9/1939 from the east, 16 days after the Germans invaded from the west. Thousands of civilians were deported by the Russians and thousands never returned.	£40-60
